

Young reporters covering Shibaei Suisan, which has resumed operations in Namie Town

With the aim of learning about the extent of the damage caused by the Great East Japan Earthquake and the Fukushima Daiichi Nuclear Power Station accident, and communicating the current state of revitalization, young journalists covered Namie Town and other areas. With the advice from actual newspaper reporters, they completed the newspaper by writing articles with the aim to communicate their hometown's progress toward revitalization. At the presentation, students received a critique of their newspapers from the special lecturer Mr. Akira Ikegami, and learned about how interesting the work of journalists can be and the ways to better communicate.

Young reporters covering Disaster Ruins Namie Municipal Ukedo Elementary School. They talked about Namie Town before the earthquake in front of the diorama.

The Earthquake: Experiences Passed

Young reporters visiting the Great East Japan Earthquake and Nuclear Disaster Memorial Museum in Futaba Town

Young journalists writing manuscripts based on their own interview notes. They brainstormed together about the ways to refine their expressions.

Newspapers with Hopes and Thoughts

They presented their newspapers in front of Mr. Akira Ikegami and other visitors, sharing what they had learned through their coverage.

Young reporters receiving advice from a newspaper reporter on manuscripts and layouts of the papers. They absorbed the skills to communicate through the 4-day program.

Published by

Lifelong Learning Division, Culture and Sports Bureau, Fukushima Prefectural Government

2-16 Sugitsuma-cho, Fukushima City 960-8670 JAPAN Phone: +81-24-521-7404 FAX: +81-24-521-5677

E-mail: shougaigakushuu@pref.fukushima.lg.jp

Website Lifelong Learning Division, Fukushima Prefectural Government

Search

Please feel free to give us your feedback.